Lorren has a Masters Degree in Clinical Psychology and has worked with children and families for over 25 years in a variety of settings including community health. For the past 5 years Lorren has also worked in private practice assisting children and adults struggling with a range of issues including stress, family disruption, anxiety, depression, and parenting issues including parenting complex children with a range of mental health and developmental care needs. Lorren maintains a strong interest in adoption and adoptive families, both in a professional sense but also as a mother of three children, the youngest of whom is an adopted child. This combined experience has enabled Lorren to understand first hand many of the struggles and difficulties experienced by children and families as they transition through various life changes. Lorren brings this knowledge and experience with a desire to support children and families to thrive.
